

Recommendation Letter

August 2026

To Whom It May Concern,

I am writing to recommend Krismia Rohmanurfitria, who reported directly to me at Bvarta for close to two years. I serve as CTO at Bvarta, an Indonesian location intelligence company, and worked closely with Krismia during her time with us.

At Bvarta, our product managers are responsible for defining and driving the products we build and sell. The work sits at the intersection of client needs, engineering capacity, and commercial priorities, and it requires someone who can hold all three in view at once.

Krismia came to the Product Manager role through a transition from our Solution team. That move required her to shift how she worked, from a delivery and client-facing orientation to owning a product over the long term. She made that adjustment and took on ownership of Targetin, our SaaS product for sales force organizations. Targetin helps field sales teams work in a more structured way and gives management better visibility into what is happening on the ground.

The most significant thing she delivered was Targetin v2, the full revamp of the product, which was released this year. What made this particularly demanding is that she first had to pick up v1, which had two years of development history behind it, understand it thoroughly, and then drive the redesign from that foundation. Shipping a revamp of a product that already has users in production is a different challenge from building something new, and she saw it through to release.

I think Krismia would be well suited to a Product Manager role on a SaaS product with an established user base and active development. I am happy to speak further if that would be helpful.

Warm regards,

Azby

CTO, Bvarta
